Voices from the Field: Featuring Community Kids Berwick Early Education Centre

We asked Justine Mckinnon, Centre Manager at Community Kids Berwick Early Education Centre, to tell us about her experience working alongside fkaCS as part of our Cultural Inclusion Support program...

Community Kids Berwick, through discussion and critical reflection as part of our UNITY project, sought support to ensure that the cultural proficiency and inclusive practices we utilise were meaningful and responsive to the children and families participating in our programs. In recognising our need for further support we contacted fkaCS to support our pedagogy and practice in ensuring children experienced a sense of safety, a sense of belonging and a sense of connection within our environment.

An fkaCS Pedagogy and Practice Consultant met with the key change agents at Community Kids Berwick. We were so grateful to have the support, suggestions and strategies to support multilingual children in our care. Focussing on pedagogy, practice and shared communication, the difference that fkaCS Cultural Inclusion Support has made to individual children and their educators is incredible. The outcomes we have observed include; families experiencing less stress, decreased anxiety in children and, the most wonderful end result; seeing children come out of their shell, gain confidence within the environment, and build strong relationships with their peers and educators.

Community Kids Berwick accessed funding for fkaCS Cultural Inclusion Support through the Inclusion Support Program (ISP) via our local Inclusion Agency, Yooralla. It is a valuable program making such an impact. This program is the key to centres moving their focus toward their inclusive practice and establishing a safe haven for families that may be feeling quite isolated. We hope that our story will inspire other centres in moving their focus to a higher level of support for multilingual families and children in their care.

Article: When you urge kids to learn how democracy is supposed to work you have an obligation to listen to what they have to say

By the Australian Research Alliance for Children and Youth (ARACY)

In our early education and care environments we are guided by the Victorian Early Years Learning and Development Framework to empower, strengthen and respond to a child's sense of agency, identity and wellbeing. "Research shows that the wellbeing of young Australians is contingent upon their needs being met in six key interlocking areas. These are: being loved and safe; having material basics; being healthy; learning; having a positive sense of identity and culture; and, participating. Participating means that young people can express their views, that their views are considered, and they are involved in decision-making processes that affect them. Where any of these six needs is not adequately met, Australian children cannot be said to be thriving" (ARACY 2018).

This article speaks on the current dialogue between Australian students and the Australian Government whilst highlighting the importance of supporting children in the six interlocking areas of wellbeing (ARACY 2018) and responding actively and purposefully to children when they are participating within programs.

Further research conducted by ARACY for The Nest Action Agenda (2014) suggests that "we need to shift our thinking to see every child as a holder, in their own right, of an entitlement to services that will promote and maintain their wellbeing", so, consider how children are participating in your programs:

- What are children telling you?
- What are their non-verbal interactions telling you?
- How do you respond to children's world views?
- How does responsive practice support a child's sense of wellbeing, identity and connectedness?

If this is an area you would like further information on and support in, contact us on 03 9428 4471 to speak with an fkaCS Pedagogy and Practice Consultant.

Scanlon Foundation: Mapping Social Cohesion

fkaCS* recently attended the launch of the Scanlon Foundation survey of social cohesion and attitudes to multiculturalism in Australia.

The report found that the high levels of support for the benefits of multiculturalism continue, despite political and media attempts to link immigration to congestion, conflict and crime.

Guest speaker, social analyst Hugh McKay, spoke about how children build social cohesion by forming friendships that bring families together who may not otherwise meet. This prompted us to think about the enormous power Early Childhood Education and Care services that are skilled in supporting children and families cultural and linguistic rights have to facilitate these connections between families, and how we can acknowledge and share some of the great work you do.

We would like to invite you to submit your stories of social inclusion to us at fkacommunications@fka.org.au.

Mural celebrating diversity and community through art unveiled in Collingwood

If you've stopped by fkaCS recently you may have felt vibrancy in the air thanks to a colourful mural gracing the side of one of Melbourne's largest housing estates. The 'tallest mural in the Southern Hemisphere' features four tenants - five-year-old Ni Na Nguyen, grandmother Badria Abdo from Ethiopia, six-year-old Arden Watson-Cropley and Yulius Antares Taime from West Papua - and was unveiled earlier last month to celebrate the incredible diversity and sense of community within the suburb of Collingwood. At fkaCS we feel honoured to be able to enjoy the beauty of this mural each day as a reminder of the work we do and the people we impact. We hope that when you next stop by you will appreciate it too!

Victorian Early Childhood Languages Program

Giving preschool children the opportunity to learn in another language.

In recognition that learning in languages other than English helps children to improve their overall literacy and understanding of how language in general works, the Victorian Government will fund the following Language programs in Victorian Kindergartens in 2019:

Learn languages at kindergarten

- children will learn in another language for up to three hours per week
- this will be offered across 120 kindergarten services

Bilingual kindergartens

- children will learn in another language for up to seven and a half hours per week
- 10 kindergarten services will receive funding to transition to this model

We welcome the Victorian Government's commitment to valuing and recognising the importance learning languages in preschools, and congratulate the Victorian Kindergartens who have been selected to provide the program within their services.

Exhibition: Identity: Yours, Mind, Ours

Oct 2018 - Apr 2019 | Immigration Museum

What does it mean to belong and not belong in Australia? This exhibition explores how our cultural heritage, languages, beliefs, and family connections influence our self-perceptions and our perceptions of other people – perceptions that can lead to discovery, confusion, prejudice and understanding.

Engaging personal stories, intriguing objects, compelling images and interactive multimedia experiences invite visitors to find connections with others, as well as challenge the assumptions we make about each other every day. Visitors are encouraged to share their stories, affirm their identities and celebrate diversity in our community.

If you are unable to participate in this exhibition, the Immigration Museum provides various other learning tools, available on their website www.museumsvictoria.com.au/website/immigrationmuseum. Perhaps a visit to this site could inspire meaningful conversation within your team and encourage exploration of what belonging means to us as individuals.

If you have visited the exhibition we would love to hear about your experience! Please phone us on 03 9428 4471 or email fkacommunications@fka.org.au.

My Two Blankets by Irena Kobald

Cartwheel has a strong sense of belonging and connectedness to her home country, however, when war breaks out she is forced to flee with her Aunty. Suddenly she finds herself in a strange new place where everything is unfamiliar and confronting. Cartwheel no longer feels connected and finds herself wondering whether she knows herself at all.

The much loved children's book My Two Blankets, written by Irena Kobald and illustrated by Freya Blackwood, was launched last month in three new bilingual editions - Farsi/English, Dari/English and Arabic/English - as part of a collaboration with the Asylum Seeker Resource Centre (ASRC). fkaCS attended the launch at Readings Carlton on October 25, and we are pleased to announce these editions of My Two Blankets are now available for members to borrow via the Multicultural Resource Centre!

Using My Two Blankets within your practice, along with a tailored list of intentional teaching ideas provided by fkaCS, will provoke your thoughts and understandings of the migration experience. It can also be used as a resource for educators who work with newly arrived families to critically reflect on their current practice.
